Until recently, Windows 10 store games could only be played when connected to the internet. Microsoft has thankfully changed this, but as usual, they had to make things complicated: You can only have one "designated offline Device" at a time. How to Set Your Designated Offline Device RELATED: Why You Shouldn't Buy Rise of the Tomb Raider (and Other PC Games) from the Windows Store If you have multiple Windows 10 devices, you'll need to mark a single one as your "designated offline device" while online before you can play games. Warning: You can only change your designated offline device at all, and there's certainly no yearly limit to your gaming PCs. This is yet another good reason to avoid buying games on the Windows Store if possible. To change your designated offline Permissions" section and ensure the "Make this PC the one I use to run some games or apps that have limited licenses, even when I'm offline" slider is set to "On". Change the setting once and you'll be informed that you can only change the setting once and you'll now want to set up your games so they'll perform offline. Not every game supports offline play, but most games in the Store do. Any network multiplayer features won't be functional and score leaderboards won't be available, but any in-game achievement popups won't actually appear until you connect to the Internet once again. To ensure a game will run offline, install that game and then launch it while connected to the Internet. The game will actually function when you're offline, you can temporarily disable your Internet connection. Close the game and head to Settings > Network & Internet connection. Attempt to launch the game while you're offline and see if it functions. If it does, you're good to go. You can take your computer somewhere without an Internet connection and continue playing games normally. Other Ways to Earn Money Gaming f you are looking for legit ways to earn an income playing games, there are more lucrative opportunities out there than simply playing games on apps. In full disclosure, these will not be quick ways to earn extra cash playing games, these will take time and a lot of work to build up.8. TwitchTwitch app, stream live games or other content like music or art demonstrations, and attract followers. If you attract enough followers and viewers, you can become a Twitch Affiliate or Partner and potentially earn thousands of dollars per week. In fact, some users earn millions of dollars annually through sponsorships and professional Fortnite gamer. That would certainly be an amazing way to achieve financial freedom!Of course, making a substantial amount of real money on Twitch takes talent and time. But it's not impossible. You just have to be prepared to put in the work to get there.9. Work as a Game TesterVideo game developers often crowdsource testing, relying on individuals like yourself to test games, find bugs, and report experiences. Check out iGameLab to get started. This site will pay you to be a beta tester and provide game feedback. Imagine making real money testing out some of the best games on the market. How cool would that be?10. Start a BlogIf you're feeling ambitious and really enjoy gaming, consider starting a blog and writing video game reviews, tutorials, walkthroughs, and Q&As.Folks who produce solid content about their favorite games and can market the blog effectively have the potential to make real money through a service like Google AdSense.11. Start a YouTube ChannelAnother way to make real money playing games is to start a YouTube channel and post video game content online. This is similar to Twitch, in that it involves posting a lot of content and attracting subscribers. If you reach a certain threshold of views, the YouTube app will compensate you. 12. Become an Esports ProThe esports market has skyrocketed in recent years, with more and more players getting sponsored and making a living simply by playing games. You have to be able to compete at gaming tournaments with the best of the best and keep up with people who are expert gamers. Consider pursuing esports if you're extremely talented at video games and capable of playing at the highest level there is. On top of the potential real cash prizes you can win at events, an esports career can lead to extra income from sponsorships — not to mention the swag you'll get from game developers. 13. Work as a Video Game CoachNot everyone is great at video games. For some, it just doesn't come naturally. As such, there's a strong opportunity at hand for those who are proficient to teach others and help them improve their game. To find work as a video game coach, start by testing your network of friends and community members. Of course, you'll have to demonstrate your skills and proficiency before someone will pay you to teach them how to play games. Here's something you can try: Ask to play games with someone, demonstrate your secrets — but for a price tag. Tips for Making Real Money Playing GamesHere are some things to keep in mind before you turn your video game hobby into a profession. Decide if You Really Want to Make Money GamingSpend some time thinking about whether you want to keep your gaming habit as a hobby or if you really want to turn it into a lucrative side hustle. For some people, making real money playing games to relax and have a good time, you might spoil your hobby by turning it into a job. Of course, this doesn't really apply if you simply want to make extra cash by fiddling with a game app. This is more for serious gamers who are considering starting a professional streaming channel or entering into the esports realm and playing more competitively for cash prizes and sponsorships. Watch Your Health This one is important: Watch your health when playing games. Playing games can become addictive, leading to hours of sitting down and staring at a screen. Often, people lose entire nights and weekends because they lose track of time. If left unchecked, gaming can wreck your health. Since that's the case, you need to take care of yourself by pacing, taking breaks, and remembering to eat well and exercise. Otherwise, you could wind up developing conditions that can be expensive and detrimental to your health in the long run. Keep Your Day JobOnce you start making real money gaming, you may fall in love with the idea and want to quit your day job to game full-time. Before you try this, stop and think the situation through. Remember that your day job pays for things like a high-speed internet connection, food, and the roof over your head — all of which are required to play video games. It can be very difficult to make a living playing games full-time, and you may find yourself regretting your decision if you opt to go this route. Of course, there are exceptions. Only you can decide how to live your life and what you want to do for a living. But don't do anything too hastily without considering all the angles. What to do With Video Game EarningsIt's important to be savvy about the money that you make playing video games. Consider trying the following strategies to maximize the income you make from playing games. Pay down debtIf you're in debt, you're going to want to get out of it as quickly as possible. Use the money that you bring in from video games to pay down your high-interest credit cards, student loans, auto loans, personal loans, and mortgages. The faster that you can escape from high-interest credit card debt, the more financially sound you'll be in the long run. InvestOnce you're in a position to do so, it's a good idea to start thinking about investing. Look into starting a taxable brokerage account or retirement account (IRA) or 401(k). Investing can potentially stretch small video game returns into much larger payouts over time. For example, say you get paid $20 for playing a video game. Your goal should be to turn that into $100 or more over time by purchasing growth stocks or other types of investments. Save It's also critical to save as much as possible. Focus on building an emergency fund and stacking up at least six months of expenses. The point of saving isn't to maximize interest, as rates across the board are too low. Instead, the point is to have money on hand so that you can pay for expenses when they arise and cover yourself in an emergency situation — like when dealing with a home or auto repair or an unexpected job loss. FAOs Here are the most frequently asked questions about getting paid to play games. Is it easy to make extra cash playing video games? It largely depends on the type of gaming that you want to be doing. For example, downloading mobile games from the App Store for iOS and Google Play for Android can easily produce rewards. However, if you want to become a professional gamer, that takes a much different level of commitment and expertise. Do iPhone and Android game apps count as a side hustle. However, if your goal is to make real money, you're probably not going to be able to cut it by playing mobile games. You'll most likely have to supplement this side hustle with other, higher-earning endeavors like driving for Lyft or Uber and walking dogs. Is a gift card better than real money because cards are inflexible and don't generate interest. Unless you're going to spend all of the money immediately, the best thing to do when getting a gift card is sell it or exchange it and then invest the proceeds. How much do professional gamers on platforms like Xbox and Playstation can make upwards of $5,000 or more each month. Top earners can generate millions annually through sponsorships and other means. This requires expert gaming ability, savvy, and above-average marketing ability on social media. Should You Start Playing Games for Money? Don't expect to hit the jackpot playing games can help you generate extra money and be used to supplement other side hustles. At the end of the day, there are tons of ways to make real money online through the gaming industry, and playing video games as a streamer, tester, or teacher may be up your alley. Just watch out for scams when downloading apps and playing on different sites, and always avoid giving out your personal information when collecting money. You'll also want to make sure that you don't spend too much time playing games to the point you can't pay your bills anymore! With the right approach, you can strike the perfect balance between making some extra money and having fun playing your favorite games. What's not to like?
